Imaterial

May 05 - July 02, 2017

Palácio presents Imaterial, the first individual exhibition of Andrés Stephanou. From May 05 to July 02 of 2017.

Exploring the dematerialization of the work of art as a field and concept, Imaterial is an exhibition condensed by digital files, into a single micro SD card. Materially impalpable, it's incorporated into space through electronic devices.

Existence and presence; a proposal of reflection on the perception of time and its passage. A sound installation and three projections compose the exhibition. In an orchestrated way, the works act centralized on a time scale, proposed as exhibition ground. In a cycle of 120 minutes, divided into two 60-minute stages, the projections presented suffer, simultaneously, minute by minute, a process of solidification or dissolution of its visual composition - inverse every hour.

Composed with a bass, linear and constant frequencies, a sound scattered in all the space synthesizes the noise generated by the terrestrial atmospheric pressure - presented in conjunction with the projections and in individual rooms. Five bluetooth interconnected sound speakers are distributed on both floors, to unify and reverberate the exhibition in a linear system. In a quiet room, the sound is proposed through a headphone, for the spectator use, paired with the bluetooth of the installation.

At the end of the full 120 minutes process, a 10-minute recess occurs on the exhibition - with both three spaces hosting the projections becoming entirely empty. During the interval, a distinct audio track is introduced: a minimal composition of sound remnants.

Acting within the proposed time-scale system, projected in the space, a thin line materializes or dematerializes its composition, in a process almost imperceptible to the spectator. Synchronized, in the first room of the exhibition, a blue strip proposes the same; both the projections with a malleable spatial format.

60 points of light are incorporated into space. Every minute, a random white dot appears or disappears - under reverse process every hour. Generated by algorithms, pre-programmed to do not repeat the combinatorial arrangement of points, the work has its own automation and, in a minimal way, operates to never be the same; every minute presents a unique visual composition. Incorporates life itself to the work, independent and self-managing of its process; constantly changing.

The time passage, in conjunction with the notion of presence in space, as central pillars for a fully digital construction and execution of Imaterial. Is introduced the dematerialization of the work of art, with all the exhibition synthesized by a single micro-card of digital files storage, under an automated system. The building becomes a capsule; immersed by the concept and composition of the exhibition.

Andrés Stephanou (1993, Porto Alegre) lives and works in Porto Alegre, Brazil.
